The Gypsy Girl mosaic was discovered beneath a fallen column in 1998 during rescue excavations of the second-century Roman settlement, Zeugma, on the banks of the Euphrates River, when the site was about to be flooded with the construction of the Birecik Dam in southeastern Turkey.

The mosaics found in the Roman houses at Zeugma date to the 2nd and 3rd centuries CE, and depict scenes from Greek and Greco-Roman mythologies and popular novels, some with captions in Greek.
